Correction

An article published in the May 30th edition of The Romulus Roman incorrectly quoted a resignation letter by William Lincoln, former member of the Wellesley Cooperative Townhouses Board of Directors.

The quote should have read: "I am deeply saddened that my best efforts, and those of other board members, have not been sufficient to avoid a great rift among some of the members of the cooperative."

Guard against summer heat

By RANDY FRANK
ANP Staff Writer

Sunny, warm weather naturally brings people outdoors for all kinds of activities.

Area residents, however, must guard against a host of heat-related illnesses during the spring and summer months.

Heat exhaustion and its most severe form, heat stroke, may strike anyone at any age during extremely hot weather, but the elderly and people with heart and breathing problems are most susceptible.

In fact, someone with heat stroke could go into a coma or die.

Although symptoms of heat exhaustion often are not readily apparent, victims will become very tired and will not be thinking clearly, according to Dr. Thomas Palmer of the Oakwood Canton Health Center.

Heat exhaust victims also do not respond appropriately to directions or questions, Palmer added.

Sweating profusely is one key signal something may be wrong.

Activities which increase the internal body temperature, especially exercises such as running or biking, could create a dangerous situation.

Even gardening and mowing the lawn in extremely hot and humid weather could be harmful without taking the proper precautions.

Palmer suggests drinking a lot of fluids if you stay in the sun for any length of time. Rest breaks in a shady areas are also recommended.

If you exercise, consider exercising in the early morning or late evening hours during a hot spell.

Although symptoms of heat exhaustion often are not readily apparent, victims will become very tired and will not be thinking clearly, according to Dr. Thomas Palmer of the Oakwood Canton Health Center."

One of the most common health problems every summer is sunburn.

Residential sun worshippers risk skin cancer in later years with constant sun exposure.

However, if you work outdoors or spend your leisure time outdoors, applying a sunscreen with a sun-protection factor of 15 is a good idea, Palmer said. A lip balm with a SPF should also be applied.

Wearing hats and sunglasses, which block ultraviolet rays, are also recommended.

In Michigan, fair-skinned individuals should apply sunscreen hourly when exposure is constant. As one travels south, closer to the equator, apply sunscreen every 30 minutes.

If you are sunburned, a 100-percent aloe gel may provide relief. Keep a tube of refrigerated analgesic aloe gel on hand to prepare for any occurrence.

If swelling and blisters occur after sunbathing, go to the hospital immediately.

Township worker charged in assault

A 40-year-old Canton Township employee has been charged with raping a 3-year-old Canton girl, according to Canton police.

Rodney Charles Brown, 40, of Canton Township was arraigned on three counts of first-degree criminal sexual conduct Thursday before Judge John MacDonald at the 35th District Court.

Brown is a Canton Department of Public Works employee. The alleged assault took place in 1989 when the victim was 3 years old.

Contact between suspect and child reportedly occurred while the suspect's wife was babysitting the victim, according to officer Patrick Nemecek.

If convicted, the suspect could be sentenced to a lengthy prison term.

Boxing knocked out in Inkster

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

Despite a technical knockout victory by Inkster police over the Penn Street Park boxers, city officials this week came out in the corner of the young pugilists.

City officials are looking into ways that would enable the Penn Park boxers to improve and advance their boxing skills by joining legitimate boxing organizations.

The park is located on Beech Daly and Penn Street. Beech Daly is the eastern limits of Inkster and Dearborn Heights.

After two afternoons of uninterrupted boxing during the week of May 12, which reportedly involved illegal betting on the outcome of the matches, some 30 members of the Inkster police and auxiliary moved into the park on May 16 and stopped the activity.

Although there were verbal exchanges between the police and the park crowd, there was no physical confrontation. No one was reported hurt.

At the May 20 Inkster City Council meeting, city officials expressed concerns about the illegal boxing and asked recreation director Ron Wolko-wicz and the Recreation Commission to meet with the groups to seek solutions to the problem.

"We are talking with legitimate boxing clubs in the area to see if we can come up with some sort of arrangement for those of our residents who wish to practice the sport of boxing," Wolkowicz said.

He said the city could not permit the unsupervised boxing in the park "because if someone got seriously hurt, the city could be liable. I don't think those who were responsible for staging those matches seriously considered the consequences of their actions. If you had a serious injury down there, who would pay for the medical expenses? Or if someone got killed?"

"It's obvious that this (boxing) couldn't have been permitted under these circumstances. And that's why we are looking into alternatives for our residents."

There has been no attempt by the park crowd to go elsewhere in the city to stage the fights, according to Inkster reports.

Also, police have been alerted to stop any group from staging fights at the other park sites, city officials said.

State, county to pay area a visit

Local businessmen and women will have an opportunity to exchange ideas with some of the top investors and financiers in the country this week.

Fred Hash, community development coordinator for the Federal Home Loan Board of Indianapolis, will join Marge Whittemore, director of Economic Development Department for Wayne County, and John Hooper, economic justice coordinator for the Episcopal Diocese of Michigan, to discuss investments in the area.

The "investment briefing" will be conducted from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on June 6 at the Inkster Recreation Complex, Middle Belt Road, just north of Michigan Ave.

"The city of Inkster is conducting this briefing to acquaint potential investors, real estate personnel, business, nonprofit organizations and public policy makers with the programs available with the Federal Home Loan Bank Board," said Clarence Oden Jr., community development director for Inkster.

Other keynote speakers will include David Mehlich, Michigan State Housing Development; Marsha Baum, Michigan Department of Commerce; and John (Jack) Schwab, NBD community relations manager.

Schwab will discuss the NBD community investment activities with its Community Development Corp., Small Business Development and its efforts with the Michigan Initiative, the Michigan State Housing Development Authority Partner/United, FHA 203 (k) Program and other neighborhood and commercial revitalization projects.

Mehlich's agenda is to provide an overview of the MSHDA affordable housing activities ranging from mortgage activity to support new construction of single family to rehabilitating older residential neighborhoods.

Hooper's topic touches upon the community and affordable housing initiatives sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese as well as other religious institutions and orders.

The Economic Justice Program in Michigan was established in 1990 to provide low cost investment projects that benefit and empower low- and moderate-income families. The application procedures for these programs also will be discussed, Hooper said.

Davis added the city also invites public institutions to invest in community development projects and activities.

"We invite our neighbors and community leaders to attend this investment briefing."

Fan, air conditioning business is booming

By PATRICIA BROWN
ANP Staff Writer

It may feel like the dog days of summer, but it's not.

Earlier-than-usual hot and humid days have made people dig out their fans and turn on their air conditioners. And the unexpected weather is making some area retailers happy.

For instance, Mike Ayerst, owner of Dan's Fan City in Westland, is enjoying the hot weather because it brings him added business.

"It's been total madness," he said. "Business is up at least 60 to 70 percent more than usual."

Most of the added business coming through his store are people looking to buy a ceiling fan. "We have the largest selection of fans in all of Michigan," Ayerst said.

He cautions buyers against buying a $29 ceiling fan that can be found at area department stores.

"You get what you pay for," said Steve Walker, assistant manager at Dan's Fan City. "Most department store fans aren't guaranteed to be quiet. It might not make noise when you first buy it, but later it will."

"Air conditioner sales are definitely up by as much as 30 to 40 percent," said Bob Herrick, a salesman at Fretter Appliances in Westland.

Herrick also has some advice for customers looking to buy an air conditioner. "You should know the size of the room, and what type of windows you have," he said.

If a customer doesn't know the size of the area he wants to cool, he probably will buy the lowest price unit and then be unhappy with it, after realizing it doesn't have the power to do the job, he said.

Electronics are his business

By JOAN DYER-ZINNER
Belleville City Editor

Froot Loops and Sugar Pops may be popular breakfast fare, but they are indigestible when fed to video cassette recorders.

Electronics technician Dennis Chie often discovers the reason a broken VCR finds its way into the repair shop is a youngster has shared his breakfast of dry cereal with the unit.

"Kids find VCS fascinating, especially the way the tape disappears inside the unit," Chie said. "They decide to see what happens when their cereal, coins or small toys are pushed inside the box. Sometimes the damage is not too extensive, but at other times the unit is severely damaged when a tape is inserted on top of a hard object."

Thunderstorms are often the nemesis of television sets.

"After every major storm, we have broken TVs to repair," Chie said. "There is always current flowing into the new sets, and the surge of power during a storm can cause problems. Often, the so-called surge protectors do not do an adequate job. People could protect their TVs by just unplugging them during a storm, but they don't seem to remember to do that."

Chie almost equally divides his time at Bud's Television and Repair between fixing television sets and VCRs.

"TVs usually last 10 to 12 years and VCRs about eight years," Chie said. "Because there are a lot of plastic and rubber parts in a VCR, they wear out sooner."

During the past few years, technology has provided the fourth generation of VCRs, ones Chie refers to as a "quantum leap" from the first units.

"In the near future, I think we'll see more small, compact VCRs with better quality for playbacks. As far as television sets go, high-definition television is right around the corner," Chie said.

The most difficult repair work Chie encounters is trying to discover the cause of an intermittent problem.

"Once in awhile, I'll work on a TV that plays for one or two days, goes out and then plays again when I turn it on the next day. Just when I think it's fixed, it starts its on-and-off routine again," Chie said.

"Finding an intermittent problem is like trying to find a rattle in your car. It really takes some detective work. Once it goes out completely, then the problem is easy to find."

Chie, a 1970 graduate of Belleville High School, has been involved in electronics since he was 15.

"I think the whole thing started when I was in junior high school and a neighbor who was interested in amateur radios gave me a small radio. The first contact I made was to California and the next was to Australia. Now, I regularly talk to a Russian in the Ural Mountains. His 12-year-old son practices his English by talking to me on the radio," Chie said.

"I started working here for Bud Brown while I was in high school. I dusted TVs, swept the parking lot and helped install antennas. Later, I started working on turntables and audios," Chie said. "I attended R.E.T.S. electronics school, and worked for a major electronics firm and a utility company and taught electronics before I came back here to work as a technician." Stressed in his former management positions, Chie decided to turn his back on the ample paychecks and benefit packages and return to the job he enjoyed.

Dennis Chie

"I enjoy what I'm doing. It's a real joy to take something that is broken and fix it. There's real satisfaction in what I do," Chie said. "It also leaves me time to work on my house, landscape, operate my ham radio and participate in Lions Club activities."

As long as there are thunderstorms and curious children with sugar-coated cereal treats, Chie believes there will be steady work for him and other electronic technicians.

River cleanup crews make a difference

By RANDY FRANK
ANP Staff Writer

Rouge River rescue workers from several western Wayne County communities spent three hours Saturday morning removing debris and trash from the river.

An estimated 3,000 volunteers at 25 major cleanup sites cleared logjams and removed tires, sinks and other disposed items for "Rouge Rescue 1991."

Site supervisors will report their findings to the Friends of the Rouge, which sponsors the event, in the next few weeks.

This year, entire families participated in the cleanup effort, according to Carol Weihe, director of the Friends of the Rouge.

Weihe attributes the successful family involvement to "Friends" volunteers who speak at schools, Girl Scout and Boy Scout meetings to generate environmental interest.

During the past five years, more than 10,000 volunteers have removed garbage and debris from the river.

Site supervisors will give the Friends of the Rouge a list of the number of volunteers and how much trash was removed.

Each site had 40-cubic-yard containers for the trash. "The cleanup is important because it's helping the ecology," said Carl Clark, site supervisor at Dorsey Park in Westland.

Thirty years ago, people swam and fished in the Rouge River, but today the river carries sewer overflows and other contaminants along with debris.

Clark, however, believes area residents can clean up the pollution.

"We destroyed it. Now we can bring it back," Clark said. "I know we can do it."

Weihe also thanks the following corporate sponsors of "Rouge Rescue 1991": WJBK-TV2, Ford Motor Co., Waste Management Inc. and City Management Corp.

In fact, WJBK-TV2 and Waste Management Inc. won "Take Pride in America" awards for their involvement in "Rouge Rescue 1991." The U.S. Department of Interior presents the awards.

Commissioner testifies on job training

By PATRICIA BROWN
ANP Staff Writer

In keeping with the times, Wayne County Commissioner Kay Beard is trying to improve the Job Training Partnership Act.

Recently, Beard appeared before a U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee to explain what she thought could be done to improve the program across the country. She provided testimony on behalf of the National Association of Counties.

The program is designed to train individuals and to place them in a job after they have completed the training portion of the program. Different states have different forms of employment available.

"We feel there needs to be flexibility," she said. "Every state has a different population, different ethnic groups, different skills that are needed."

"There are an awful lot of people who are functionally illiterate. There aren't many jobs today that require just a strong back."

Beard understands the necessity to promote computer literacy. "Jobs today are becoming more and more technical," she said.

She also asked the subcommittee to consider increasing the cap on support services and administrative funding from 15 to 20 percent apiece.

"This change," Beard said, in a prepared statement, "recognizes the increased management responsibilities required of service delivery areas and the additional support they will need to expand assistance to our most needy clients."

As job skills continue to become more and more complex, the need to supply more job training services will continue to grow, according to Beard. Most of the individuals who will benefit from these programs will not receive funds from social services. This means they will be responsible for their own food, and for providing their own medical insurance, if their job doesn't provide it.

The need for flexibility is seen in the case of transportation right here in Michigan, and even more so in Wayne County, Beard said.

"Without increased support for transportation, child care, meals and other personal needs," Beard told subcommittee members, "many of these clients will not be able to avail themselves of training."

Another area Beard hopes will continue to grow is the separate program that provides employment to area youth during the summer.

"Because so many economically disadvantaged youths depend on this program for work experience, for development of good work habits and for income, it should not be eliminated or restricted only to in-school youth," she said.

After meeting with subcommittee members, Beard said she was happy with the response she received.

Musical comedy to be staged

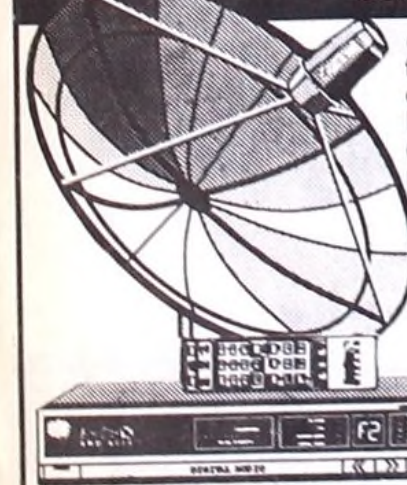

A musical comedy, murder mystery and fantasy comedy are slated to be staged as the last three offerings in the 1991 Greenfield Village Theatre Company season.

Beginning June 7, Of Three I Sing, written by George S.

Kaufman, with music and lyrics by the Gershwin brothers, will be staged at the Henry Ford Museum Theatre. The 1931 Pulitzer prize-winner features such songs as Love is Sweeping the Country and Of Thee I Sing, Baby.

SCHOOL NEWS

A diary: Local high school students explore their own worlds

(Editor's note - the following article was written by a high school student as a special feature of The Associated Newspapers.)

By TAMIE JOVANELLY
ANP Special Writer

Tamie Jovanelly is a busy sophomore at Wayne Memorial High School. She is very involved in school activities and has received much recognition for her enthusiasm toward earth awareness.

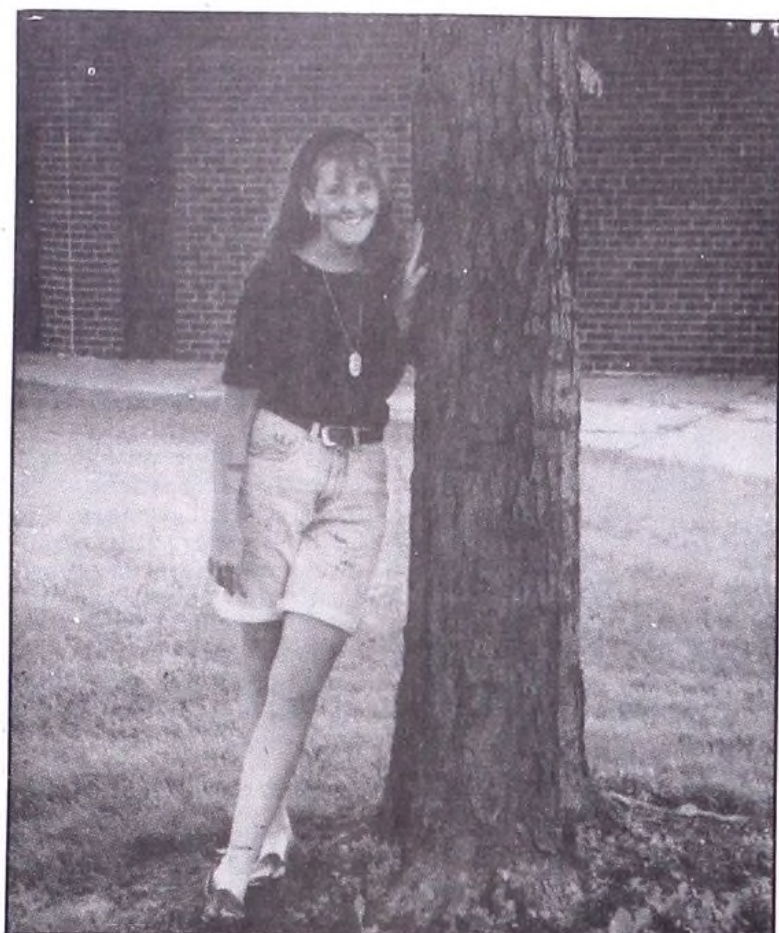

Tamie is currently the corresponding secretary of the Student Senate. This is not a new experience for Miss Jovanelly, however. At Franklin Junior High, Tamie was a Senate representative for two years. "Being on the Senate has taught me more leadership qualities. I hope to continue being a Senate member my last two years at Wayne," said Tamie.

Another extra-curricular activity she is a member of is the Spanish Club. "The Spanish Club has given me an opportunity to make a lot more friends." Just recently, Tamie traveled to Cedar Point with her new friends.

Tamie is also on the staff of the Wayne Hi-Lite, the school newspaper. Last year, she wrote for the school newspaper at Franklin.

When the school day is over, this 3.5-grade-point-average student heads out to the baseball diamond for a hard day's work at softball practice. Tamie struts her stuff on the field in the positions of catcher and third baseman for the team.

If you were to ask any of her friends about Tamie, the first thing that comes to mind is the environment. According to Tamie, "It's up to our generation to get more involved in saving the planet because it is the only one we have." And Tamie is involved. Every fourth Saturday, Tamie is a volunteer at the DPW building, the local recycling center. Nichole Blair nominated Tamie for the Detroit Free Press Earth Achiever Award, unbeknownst to Tamie. Shortly, though, Tamie will find out she had won this award. How did she feel? "I was surprised," she said. "There was so many people."

As a result of this award, Tamie is soon to be taping a program for a Wayne cable station.

In the future, Tamie would like to attend Michigan State University and major in forestry. She would like to go on to become an environmental specialist and work in conjunction with NASA, National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

In her spare time, you can find Tamie at the beach or perhaps ice skating. Tamie describes herself as a typical teen-ager. "I just like to hang out and have fun like everyone else," she said.

As you can see, Wayne High excels in producing only the best. However, this school, and all others in the Wayne-Westland school district, soon may not be able to have the activities and programs that allow students such as Tamie Jovanelly to achieve their goals. Tamie works hard to do what she can for herself, others and the planet we live on. She can not do it without the help of a good educational program.

One last word from Miss Tamie Jovanelly, "Save a tree."

By GLEN DARE
ANP Special Writer

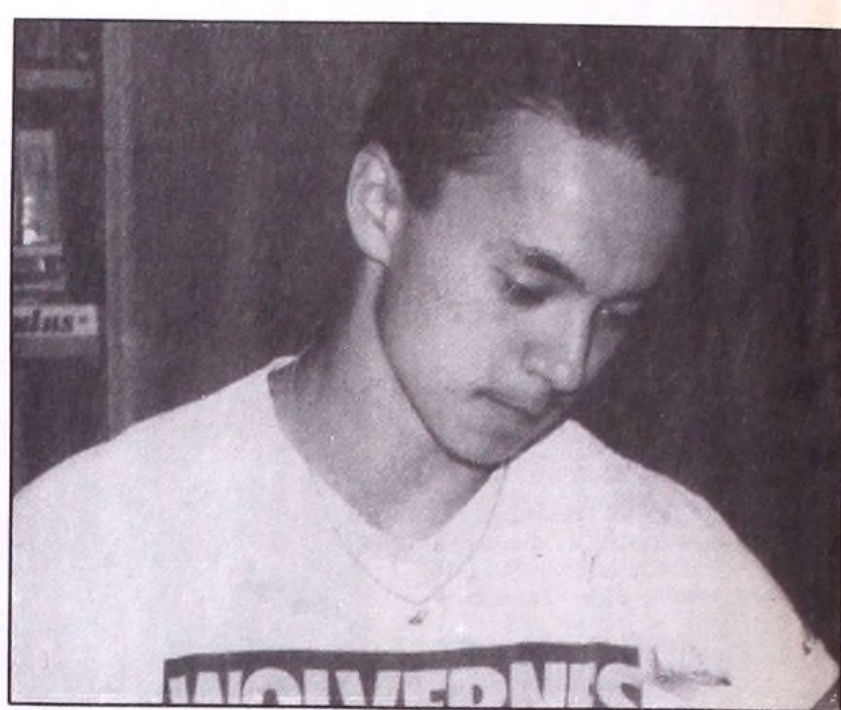

Wayne Memorial High School has long been a leader in providing an excellent program in public education. The proof of the superiority in our area often manifests itself in the achievements of the students who excel in a full program in our schools. One such example of distinction in the Wayne-Westland district is Wayne Memorial High School student Glen Dare. This 11-grader clearly illustrates the level of academic success that can be achieved under a complete program, and the need for classes and activities that constantly challenge the youth in our community.

Glen involves himself in several goal-oriented classes at Wayne Memorial. Aside from the basics of math and science, he also takes occupational classes, such as Drafting III. Dare got involved in drafting because he wished to pursue a career in aerospace engineering. Glen, who received an award for outstanding draftsmanship last year, said he especially enjoys computer aided design.

"I think the most enjoyable aspect of drafting class is the hands-on experience with the computers used in the world of engineering field. It's prepared me for what I want to do later on in life."

Another class that Glen participates in is yearbook, where he holds the position of school photographer. His duties include photographing student activities and sports events.

"I enjoy photography. I think of it more as a hobby. Even though it takes up a lot of my time. I still have found the experience to be valuable," said Dare. "It has taught me the importance of getting things done quickly and efficiently."

Sometimes during the day, Glen must also attend to his duties as Student Senate President. Dare, who was elected to this position last spring, is one of only a few juniors in Wayne history to hold this office. "I was honored to be chosen by my peers to represent the student body," said Glen. As president, Dare is responsible for the organization and execution of activities such as Homecoming, blood drive, fund-raisers and Coming Home.

"This year was a challenge," said Glen. "It turned out to be a lot more work than I had originally planned it to be, but with the help and enthusiasm of students and other officers we pulled through."

Aside from political duties, Glen finds time to run of the track team. Dare, who has been running for five years, participates in several events, including the 400- and 1-mile relays. "I was glad to be a part of the team this year," said Dare. "Despite our lack of runners, we did well."

Somewhere between school and leisure activities, this busy student finds time to hold down a job with Meijer Corp. Glen's official title is bagger, but his duties range from cleaning to collection carts. Dare said having an after-school job has given him a taste of what employers want. This 3.5-grade-point-average student also said this information would be useful to him when seeking work after graduation from (hopefully) Westpoint.

The all-around excellence found in Mr. Dare is not uncommon in the Wayne-Westland Public School system. Glen simply represents a fraction of the intelligence and leadership capabilities present in our school system today. The remaining question is, is it possible to have complete, prepared students like Glen Dare, in a program that is not complete?

Murder still stumps police

By TOM MOORADIAN
ANP Staff Writer

When Kenneth Welch pulled into his driveway on Hivley Street, he sensed something was wrong.

Welch ordered his two small children, aged 6 and 8, to remain in the car while he went to investigate.

There was no snow on the streets on this night, Feb. 17, 1982.

The Inkster resident got out of the vehicle not realizing it would be the last time he would see his children. Or his wife.

Welch walked up to his front door not knowing what to suspect. And as he approached the front door, two youths bolted from behind it.

Tragically, Welch decided to give chase. The two suspects ran west on Hivley. Welch, close behind, finally caught up with the culprits. A struggle ensued and, apparently one of the thugs pulled a gun.

Realizing he was no match for the gun and the two culprits, Welch turned and dashed down the street.

"There were shots fired," said detective James Horne of the Inkster Police Department, "and two hit the victim, fatally wounding him."

Horne, who was assigned to the 1982 homicide, said interviews with residents in the neighborhood did not produce any clues or suspects.

"The culprits apparently had gained entry into the Welch house through a rear door and were in the process of burglarizing it when they probably heard the car pull up."

Horne said Welch arrived home around 9:30 p.m. "and his wife had been working at the time, so there was no one inside."

The Inkster detective didn't know what made the victim suspicious.

Horne added nothing

apparently was stolen from the house.

"If they had stolen something, it may have helped us trace it back to the suspects," he said. "It's a case you'd like to see a conclusion to. These guys were out there probably boasting how they got away with murder."

"But here was this decent family, two small children, whose lives were shattered because of this."

According to the police report, the suspects are two black males. No getaway vehicle was seen.

If you have any information about Welch's killers, contact detective Horne at the Inkster Detective Bureau (563-9856). If you do not want to get involved with the police, contact Associated Newspapers staff writer Tom Mooradian at 729-4000.

"This is one homicide I would like to close the books on," Horne said.
